

Many Die In Norfolk Air Station Explosion

Death toll in the United States naval air station explosion at Norfolk, Va., now 24, was expected to increase as the condition of 14 of the 257 persons injured remained critical. The blast, revealed by preliminary investigation to have come from ammunition in transit, rocked the station, damaging a number of buildings, including the airplane hangar. The War Today...

By DeWitt MacKenzie
AP War Analyst

PRESIDENT Roosevelt's review of the war left me with the comfortable feeling that the commander-in-chief had called me into his private office and in his own colorful way had laid before me all the essential facts which any citizen outside the high command could reasonably expect to know.

F.D.R.'s commentary struck me as calculated to inspire complete confidence in Allied progress, while making it quite clear that we still have a tough job ahead of us. One of the outstanding impressions it conveyed was the President's conviction that the citizenry can be dealt with on a man-to-man basis and doesn't need to be beaten over the head with a propaganda club in order to keep it in line.

The President had to hold out on us in one important matter and that's when we are to get the other invasions which have been promised. He said new operations were coming, but he didn't say when. Still, that's the concern of our military chiefs and we need know only that these dangerous expeditions will be undertaken as soon as it is feasible.

One of the places where invasion is possible, of course, is the Balkans and while Mr. Roosevelt didn't indicate anticipation of immediate action there he did make a blunt and suggestive bid for Rumania, Hungary, and Bulgaria to desert Hitler. With them he coupled Finland, which has been flirting anxiously

Norfolk Air Depot
Blast Toll Rises To 24; Probe Opens

(By Associated Press)
NORFOLK, Va., Sept. 18.—Naval authorities expressed fear today of an increase in the death toll of 24 caused by the disastrous ammunition blast that wrecked a section of the Norfolk naval air station.

Thirteen of the 250-odd injured were reported officially to be critically hurt.

The Navy kept mum on the cause of the area's worst disaster since the crash of the Italian dirigible Roma in 1922, with a loss of 34 lives, except to say witnesses had informed those in authorities that the explosion originated in ammunition that was being moved.

Norfolk police said they had been informed that depth charges of the type carried by the Navy's anti-submarine patrol bombers had exploded, and civilian sources said the blast touched off a truck cargo of aviation gasoline.

The concussion smashed a hangar and several lesser buildings and damaged several other hangars. At the point of the blast, a civilian said there was a six-foot trench torn in a heavy concrete runway for a length of 40 feet.

Rear Admiral H. P. Leahy, commander of the Fifth naval district, appointed a Navy board of investigation.

GOSHEN UNIT PLANS
OCT. 1 INSPECTION

Plans for inspection night were formulated when Goshen grange met Friday evening.

Mahoning County Deputy Master F. C. Heintze will make the inspection Oct. 1, when degree work will be given a class of candidates.

One application for membership was received and delegates to Ohio State grange were balloted on last night.

During the lecture hour Misses Helen Starbuck and Martha Weinert contributed piano solos, and Miss Lois Beck a vocal solo, accompanied by Miss Naomi Capel.

Following the program a "penny" supper was enjoyed.

SALEM DRIVER HURT
IN ROUTE 14 CRASH

Alfred B. Williamson of R.D. 3, Salem, was seriously injured when his and another truck driven by William Fouzalt, 22, of Albany, N. Y., collided at 7 p. m. yesterday on Route 14, east of Washingtonville.

Both vehicles were traveling east when the accident occurred. The Williamson car attempted to make a left turn as the truck passed the car, state patrolmen said.

Williamson, admitted to Salem City hospital, is suffering from a concussion, fractured collarbone and lacerations of the face and body.

FROST COVERS
OHIO REGIONS

Crop Damage Is Checked;
28-Degree Reading In Salem Among Lowest

Frost, of killing proportions in some areas, fell across most of Ohio early today.

Just how much damage it might have done was a matter of deep concern in state agricultural quarters.

The lowest figure the weather bureau had was 28 right here in Salem. Canton reported 31, while the mercury dropped to 35 at Cambridge and Jackson, 36 at Ashland and Circleville, 37 at Cincinnati, 38 at Lima, Wilmington and Columbus, 39 at Akron and Marion, and 40 at Sidney, Norwalk and Cleveland.

"Anytime the weather drops to around 35 it stops corn and tomatoes," said a specialist at Ohio State university. "Of course we can't tell yet just how much damage was done, but it looks like it might be heavy."

The weather bureau said it was possible that some areas escaped frost altogether, but generally speaking it covered most of the state.

The earliest killing frost heretofore came on Sept. 28 last year, while the average date of arrival has been Oct. 10 in Ohio.

Advancing Red Army At Gates of White Russia,
Moscow Reports

(By Associated Press)
MOSCOW, Sept. 18.—Military dispatches reported today that the Red army had reached the gates of White Russia after crossing the Dvina and capturing the key central fortress of Bryansk.

One of Russia's most important networks of communications, including the central stretch of the Moscow-Kiev railroad and the junction leading to White Russia, was cleared by the Red army advance.

A Pravda dispatch said reoccupation of Orel province virtually was completed after the taking of Bryansk. White Russia borders this province on the west and includes the important strategic centers of Gomel, Mogilev and Vitebsk and the regional capital of Minsk.

White Russia lies about 70 miles west of Bryansk at the nearest point.

Erect New Defenses

Adolf Hitler's battered German legions, hurled back on every sector of the eastern front and smothered from loss of the key central fortress of Bryansk, were reported piling up new defenses today before their Dnieper river bases of Kiev and Smolensk.

Punished from the incessant hammer blows of the hard-slugging Russians, the Nazi lines before the Dnieper barrier were said to be curling up everywhere.

From north of Bryansk down through the central and southern Ukraine to the shores of the sea of Azov and the Crimean gateway, the Germans were in retreat, leaving behind great stores of war gear in their desperate haste to escape the Red army steamroller.

The Dnieper line was in immediate danger at two main points. The Russians admittedly were throwing prodigious strength against the war-weary enemy.

Capture of Bryansk, junction point for six major Russian railroads and its sister city of Beshitsa to the north, was announced by Premier Joseph Stalin himself, and another victory salute from 124 guns hailed the victory in the Russian capital. It brought the Red army forces to within 70 miles of White Russia, rich grain country held by the Germans more than two years. Bryansk fell to the Nazi drive into Russia on Oct. 13, 1941.

Buck also announced the first fall meeting of the executive board of the Columbiana County Boy Scout council at Lisbon Thursday evening, Sept. 30, when reports on the executive conferences, the regional meeting in Cincinnati and camp reports will be made.

GERMANS FALL
Back To Flee
Pincer Trap

By WES GALLAGHER

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN NORTH AFRICA, Sept. 18.—The battle for the Salerno bridgehead was virtually ended with the Germans putting out from the south where the Allies ended 11 miles inland, and with other Allied forces seizing two islands off the northern spur of the Bay of Naples itself.

"The British Eighth army now has joined the American Fifth army, and they are virtually acting as one army," in position for a drive on Naples, a headquarters officer declared.

There still was heavy fighting near Salerno, the gateway to Naples, but the bridgehead itself was rapidly expanding into one solid front as the Germans swung their southern flank northward toward central Italy to avoid being caught in pincers between the Eighth and Fifth armies.

German headquarters announced occupation of the island of Elba, 32 miles east of Corsica and eight miles from the jutting Italian west coast, and surrender of its 7,000 Italian troops. (Elba, Napoleon's first home in exile, is about 120 miles northwest of Rome.)

The Allied spearhead driving into the crumbling German flank in the extreme southern Salerno bridgehead captured the town of Rocca-di-Pacina, 11 miles inland from the coast, the bulletin announced.

LABOR BUDGETING
BARUCH PROPOSAL

Seen As Solution To Manpower Shortages and Father Draft

(By Associated Press)
WASHINGTON, Sept. 18.—Congress bent a willing ear today to a proposal by Bernard M. Baruch for the budgeting of labor to war plants, with the hope that here was the solution to the interlinked problems of manpower shortages and the draft of fathers for military service.

Baruch, adviser extraordinary to War Mobilization Director James F. Byrnes, suggested the voluntary pooling of labor in shortage areas, with the producers of most essential military equipment getting first call on workers. His suggestion was contained in a report to Byrnes, inserted in the Congressional record by Senator Vandenberg (R., Mich.).

When Baruch said such a plan might be the only alternative to a general labor draft he struck a responsive chord, particularly among members of the Truman war investigating committee who have made an intensive study of the manpower problem.

Chairman Truman (D., Mo.) told reporters he hoped the Baruch plan would obviate the necessity of enacting compulsory manpower legislation.

The plan won approval also of Senator Hill (D., Ala.), who, however, retained his opinion that the only way of getting maximum production would be for Congress to pass national service legislation.

The compulsory labor control idea has popped up several times in consideration of a pending bill by Senator Wheeler (D., Mont.) to postpone the drafting of pre-World War I fathers for the remainder of this year and Baruch will be asked to tell the military committee Monday what he thinks about the over-all problem.

CONGRESS SHOULD TAKE THE LEAD

Word from Washington that congress must sit on its hands until the treasury department tells it what to do does not go down well with taxpayers. If that is the Roosevelt administration's plan, congress should take the lead and make its own tax recommendations.

It takes about four months for a revenue proposal to get through committee hearings, legislative action and final passage into law. Under the new system of withholding taxes, unless a revenue measure is in force by the beginning of the calendar year, delayed action will add confusion. Too much confusion already has been created by the inactivity of the treasury department and the majority members of the tax committees in the house and senate.

The time to start work on tax changes for the calendar year 1944 is now, if it is not already too late. The time to finish the work is before Christmas. The time to tell taxpayers what is in store for them next year is on or before Jan. 1, not months afterward when the changes that inevitably will be made will have to be made retroactive, with the usual accompaniment of red tape and complications.

The public anger that began to simmer when the withholding tax was delayed and mismanaged will come to a boil if the treasury and the Democratic majorities on the congressional tax committees conspire again to add needless complications to the payment of taxes.

NO SURE CURES

Those who propose a national service act as the cure for a manpower shortage in this country should be especially interested in the story passed through British censorship of a strike of 15,000 coal miners in Nottinghamshire over the issue of an 18-year-old boy who refused to obey a government order to work underground in a mine. Though the British system of labor conscription has been getting results largely by being held in abeyance, the difficulty of obtaining manpower for the mines, according to the report of the strike published by The New York Times, is expected to force authorities to conscript youths for the pits.

As discussion of a national service act develops, stimulated by official testimony of acute manpower shortages in the armed services and industrial production, the chief point to be remembered is that such an act would not be a sure cure. Too much should not be expected, if it is tried. It might ease some problems, but almost certainly others would be created. A home-grown sample of possible complications appeared this week in Trenton, N. J., when it was disclosed that union dues had been collected from United States soldiers who volunteered to work in canneries to help save the tomato crop.

WAR OF PRODUCTION

When Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau lists material losses in the invasion of Sicily to reveal the necessity for full popular response to the Third War Loan drive he proves the intrinsic merit of the government's new policy of giving the public more facts about the war—and more quickly.

With so much as treatment for the "complacency" that public officials charge with slowing up the production effort but as legitimate information to give war workers a sense of purpose, the expenditure rate of war material in battle needs to be realized. It is the complete answer to all who have wondered about accumulations of equipment.

Nothing has changed to alter the original concept of World War II as a war of production. United Nations successes to date and to come are due to their combined ability to produce and to bring to bear at critical points great masses of material as good or better than the enemy's. Anything that will instruct ordinary people in the manner of fighting and winning this kind of war is excellent, not as propaganda, but as information which the public should possess. That has been the standing argument of the press throughout the controversy over the government's handling of war information.

THE EXPERTS COULD BE WRONG

With the courage that comes from knowing too much, military experts now are explaining when, how and why Russia's summer offensive will lose its momentum, and finally come to a standstill at the Dnieper river. The experts could be wrong again.

They do not know the condition of the retreating Germans, nor the condition of the advancing Russians. They have no way of knowing the strength of the Dnieper river defense line they talk about so glibly. They cannot guess the state of mind of their old favorite, Gen. Mud, who is supposed to come to the aid of the Germans by stopping the Russian advance, but also might bog down the German retreat.

Two experts are not personally to blame for their ignorance—nor even for the fact they are classed as experts. It is their business to guess, and their fate as often as not to guess wrong. However, after four years of war in which virtually all their guesses have been wrong, their followers are personally to blame if they join the experts in jumping at conclusions.

At this stage of the game anyone who takes it for granted that the German withdrawal, or retreat, or whatever it is, from Russia is going to stop at the Dnieper river because an expert says so is bucking the law of averages.

WHEN SMOKE IS NOT A NUISANCE

Smoke belongs with chilly weather, to give savor to its odors. There are almost as many varieties as there are substances to burn, but the typical autumn smoke list is confined to a favorable few.

Heading the list is, of course, wood smoke, subject to almost infinite classification. Except for a discerning few, however, wood smoke in the fall is—wood smoke.

smoke, with pleasant associations of marshmallow toasting, wiener frazzling, camping, picnicking and many vaguely remembered but precious recollections of childhood.

Next would be leaf smoke, which resembles many other rare odors in the delicacy of the portions required for pleasure; too much at once is not a perfume but a stench. It is undeniable that millions never have smelled leaf smoke, yet even they would recognize it as an autumn odor.

Coal smoke certainly would be included, perhaps over the objections of those who do not know there is a time when it is not a nuisance. It is at its best toward dusk drifting upward from a grate fire into the frosty air. And one must mention grass smoke, rubbish smoke and even tobacco smoke. In the September air, they are different; i. e., better.

THE STARS SAY :

For Sunday, September 19

SUNDAY'S horoscope is a most propitious one for all manner of spiritual, mystical and intellectual vocations and avocations. It is an excellent time for study, meditation, research and all serious and progressive pursuits. Matters of public interest should be forwarded, travel, writings, encouraged. But in social, domestic or romantic affiliations the signs are not harmonious.

Those whose birthday it is are under a decidedly encouraging rule, with all the intellectual, business, financial and creative faculties under high stimulus for success and progress. Direct attack as well as finesse may be used to good advantage. But romance, social and domestic affiliations may be difficult because of unrestrained impulses and emotions. Be calm and collected.

A child born on this day should have fine intellectual powers, with keen insight, intuition, as well as shrewd and analytical qualities, making for outstanding success. Its personal happiness may suffer from its lack of emotional discipline.

For Monday, September 20

MONDAY'S astrological forecast points to a period of trial and error, in which time should be taken to analyze, revise and attack with energy and shrewdness. Use quiet and restraint where the impulse is toward strife, tempest and excitement. Under such stress relax, seek diversion or enjoyment, especially with the young.

Those whose birthday it is are likely to have a year in which obstacles, delays, restrictions and depressions threaten defeat unless rigorous effort toward correcting mistakes and attacking impediments is used. The tendency to fly off the handle in defeat, to act impulsively and recklessly, may but accent the dangers.

A child born on this day should have much skill and mentality to attain success, but its conflicting traits of character need direction. Its impetuous nature is offset by serious, reserved and depressing states of mind.

GUARDING YOUR HEALTH

Work of the Medical Corps

BY LOGAN CLENDENING, M.D.

A LETTER from a young protégé of mine tells something of life in the army. He is a medical officer in a large camp and he says the motto of the Medical Corps is, "Do the impossible routinely."

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

He supposes things will go along the way they are going and then get worse. It is always the privilege of the soldier to grouse.

This doctor who was showing promise of becoming one of the best endocrinologists in the country says that most of his work consists in reclassifying misfits who should never have been allowed in the army in the first place—a statement which conforms my remarks of yesterday about the number of nervous and mental breakdowns induced by army life.

The Medical Corps seems to be doing magnificent work in this war, greatly improving the record of the last conflict. We have just received some of the reports on the Tunisian campaign.

Air Transportation

Most of the good results are ascribed to transportation of the wounded by air. In France in 1914-1918 the wounded were often treated in dressing stations and evacuation hospitals for days before transportation to a base was available, and then the trip was made in a jolting ambulance over rough and contested roads. The result was the casualty often reached the base in shock and the mortality rate was correspondingly high. In a British hospital in France in 1917 there were 1,300 severely wounded of whom 113 died. In Tunisia this year a similar hospital had 1,500 severely wounded of whom 5 died.

The transportation was accomplished by the use of planes carrying 18 stretcher cases, accompanied by doctor and nurses. In April 7,000 were thus transported to base hospitals. The planes are also used to carry medical supplies promptly up to the front line.

Remarkable Achievement

A remarkable achievement was to fly the whole of a small general hospital to American troops isolated in enemy country.

A surgeon with parachute troops broke his leg above the knee in landing. He concealed the injury for three weeks during which he performed a number of major operations, giving himself local anesthetics in between. That, ladies and gentlemen, is intestinal fortitude.

There has been no lockjaw and little of the gas gangrene so prevalent in the last war and sepsis has been kept down to a minimum by the use of the sulfa drugs.

When the full statistics are published it is calculated that they will astonish the world.

Questions and Answers

P. H.:—How many calories in a Coco-cola? How many calories is a person allowed to keep the same weight?

Answer: Sixty calories in a bottle of Coco-cola—10 to the ounce. The number of calories needed to maintain weight depends on your age, your weight and the amount of work you do. For an adult doing moderate work it is about 15 calories a pound.

H. M. L.:—My mother is 60 years of age and is troubled with bunions. Is the operation for this successful? How long should she be in bed?

Answer: The operation usually gives great relief. She should be in bed or chair for several weeks.

M. E. R.:—What is the treatment for impetigo skin eruption?

Answer: Impetigo is a pus infection of the skin and germs, such as ammoniated mercury ointment, are used.

N. L.:—What is the difference between milk leg and thrombosis? Does it follow an operation? Can it be cured or will the leg continue to swell?

Answer: There is no difference. Thrombosis—that is the formation of a clot—in the femoral vein of the leg causes the leg to swell, which is called milk leg. It follows operation in a very small percentage of cases. With plenty of rest it subsides and the leg does not go on swelling.

E. T. W.:—Does taking mineral oil daily cause excessive hair to grow on the face and body?

Answer: No.

CHAPTER TWENTY-SIX
Outside Spud grinned happily. "Well, after those few words of cheer, what now?"

"Now—Drew jumped into the car—Now we take Nan Alter's loan."

The agreements were easily reached. She made only one condition—absolute secrecy, whether they succeeded or failed. She wanted no receipt, no contract; but it was understood that 40 per cent of the proceeds were to be hers. Her lawyer would deliver the bonds the following morning.

And those next days were the busiest Drew and Spud had ever known. They managed to scrape together just a little over sixty thousand dollars, and by exercising the utmost economies Drew believed he could drill to a depth of six thousand feet—there he hoped to strike pay-sand. But it would leave nothing for unforeseen and unpredictable accidents.

"We can't afford mistakes," he said. "Everything's got to click."

"Yeah," Spud agreed, "and that only happens in Paradise."

News spread rapidly that they had taken out a drilling permit, and within a week two thousand dollars more was added to their slim capital by men who felt the irrepressible urge of the male American to take a chance. They all knew that if Drew failed they would lose every cent; if he struck oil they might make a thousand dollars for every dollar they risked.

Spud's responsibility was the drilling crew—men who would work as one smooth-running machine, and who could be trusted to know their job. It was on the wise selection of these that the success of the entire enterprise might hang.

Always a difficult task at best, Spud found it doubly difficult now. Good men were hard to get. He could not hope to bid against States Oil or the Planet, and there was no future work to promise beyond the sinking of this one well. A few men were attracted by the promise of a generous bonus if the well was successful, and the salary of every worker was guaranteed for the life of the permit by depositing the money in advance. But for the most part Spud had to be satisfied with the hangers-on of the oil camps.

men who for one reason or other, the companies did not want. Two drillers, out of personal friendship for Spud, consented to throw in their lot with the wildcaters. The third, a Russian named Sergei, made Spud hesitate a long time.

"He's a queer, run-soaked bird," Spud told Drew. "I've known him for years. The Planet fired him for trying to drink up all the hootch in South America, then he went with States Oil and they canned him for the same reason. Once they tried to take his liquor away, and three men couldn't hold him down. With just enough firewater he's a swell driller, but with too much or too little he's a human menace. If I take him on, we'll have to watch him like a hawk." And in the end, Spud, out of sheer desperation, decided to try him.

With all their energies, the two partners next threw themselves into the task of buying equipment. To conserve their little stock of capital, they bought with utmost care, picking secondhand machinery wherever possible. Two trucks, capable of carrying a 16-ton body load, were their first purchases; then came slush pumps, a rotary table, racks of casing joints, drill pipes, fishtail bits, and countless drums of fuel oil, bags of cement, and steel for the derrick. They were under no illusions as to the heavy cost of jungle drilling, yet they both winced when they had to pay five hundred dollars for a single 22-inch fish-tail bit.

Long, hard days. Up before daylight, for hours were precious in this race against time and shrinking funds. A deal of work had to be done preparatory to the actual drilling, and a road built down over one rim of the savanna to the site of the well. Taking command of his crew of laborer, Drew staked out the road to the river bank, and to the surfacing and drainage of that road he gave his personal supervision, for over it would come heavy machinery, valuable material whose loss would cripple him, and he could take no chances.

Gloria, throughout those bustling times, was just as busy as the others. Two days after the break with her father, Ray Cutter gave her assurance of a nursing position in the big oil hospital on the Island of Aruba. She was eager to begin at once, but the place would not be vacant for thirty days, and to occupy that interval she acted as temporary relief nurse at the States Oil Hospital. Meanwhile, Molly persuaded her to live with them until her boat sailed for Aruba—not a difficult task for the friendship between the two women had grown rapidly, and Gloria was sharing the thrill and excitement of their new venture.

Twice Thorpe drove her across the savanna to the spot where his laborers were clearing a patch of jungle on the river bank. Here the well would be located, and up on the edge of the savanna men were thatching three long one-storied shacks for the use of Molly, Spud, and Drew. Plank floors and palm-leaf roofs, they were little more than crude shelters against wind and rain, but for the next three months at least that was to be their only home; and it was to be Gloria's until she sailed for Aruba.

Swiftly too swiftly for Molly—the day dawned for them to leave. Clearer than anything else, that simple act of locking the cottage door brought to each of them the knowledge that at last they were on their own, and at the turn in the road Molly looked sorrowfully back at the trim little vine-covered cottage that for so long had been home.

They were leaving comfort and security behind. They were moving beyond the fringe of civilization. The pleasant evenings at the club, the movies, the easy companionship of men and women dropping in when work was through—all this was over. No longer were they part of a well-organized and sheltered community. They were coming to grips with the jungle.

Their first night by the Rio Bravo brought them a foretaste of the new life. By dusk a cloud of mosquitoes swarmed up from the river, filling the air with a high-pitched battle song, sending them to the shelter of the screens, where for the rest of the evening they sat about the little gas lamp, and twice from the river they heard the deep challenging roar of tiger. It was like the voice of the jungle itself, the jungle that stretched for mile after unknown mile to the east, a land of hummocks, tidal swamp, and snake-infested waters as far as the Orinoco.

A chastened, silent group—their only links with civilization, the rough road that led out over the savanna and the short-wave radio on the desk.

But isolation was not their only problem. Even in the routine details of ordinary living the world had become more precarious. No longer could Molly buy food and supplies at the company commissary, where everything was guarded by systems of rigid inspection and snickering. From now on she would have to trade at the village markets, where meat hung for days infested with flies, and instead of the carefully supervised water of the camp they would have to bring up water from the river and boil it over the charcoal fire, then add iodine for safety's sake.

It was to be Molly's never-ending task to feed the crews, with the help of two Indian girls; and food would have to be brought in by the truckload. A different tale, too, cooking with charcoal; and often she was to long for the trim gas range of the oil camp. Night and day the fires would have to be kept going for the mud-spattered men who came in, hungry and tired from their shift.

The day of their arrival Drew had a telephone line strung from the camp to the village, while the rig-builders with their safety belts and hard-shell hats began erecting the great steel derrick.

Working at top speed, they came at last to the long-awaited day when the actual drilling was to begin. The derrick was completely rigged, steam hissed in the boiler, everything stood in readiness for the drill to turn. And in spite of himself, Spud's hand trembled as he helped screw the bit into the collar.

Molly and Gloria were there. To Molly it was an old, old tale; but to Gloria it was all excitingly new, and the complex array of machinery not a little bewildering. The two big mud pits near the derrick aroused her curiosity.

"They're the slush pits," Drew told her. "Drillers couldn't get along without mud." He thrust his hand beneath the surface to show her its liquid consistency. "We pump that mud down to the drill, where it collects all the ground-up rock that would clog the drill and stop it. Then we force it up again into the settling basin, and it's ready to repeat the trip." Drew smiled. "You're a nurse—think of it as the circulation of the blood, picking up waste matter and getting rid of it. But that mud does something else too. When we get down to where there's gas pressure, we make the mud heavier, and the weight of it keeps the gas and oil from blowing out and wrecking the well."

"Then how does the oil ever come up?"

"When everything is set, we make the mud lighter by diluting it with water, and we let the oil come up gradually. If it wasn't for that mud, the pressure from below might blow the derrick a mile back into the jungle."

Drew laid his hand on a huge metal wheel beneath the derrick floor. "And if oil or gas comes on suddenly, we close this blowout preventer and shut off the pressure. Let's hope we won't need it Spud's ready. Come on!" Drew helped her up the short ladder to the floor of the derrick.

Spud was standing with one hand on the engine throttle, the other on the brake. Already one pump had been started, and now he threw in the table clutch.

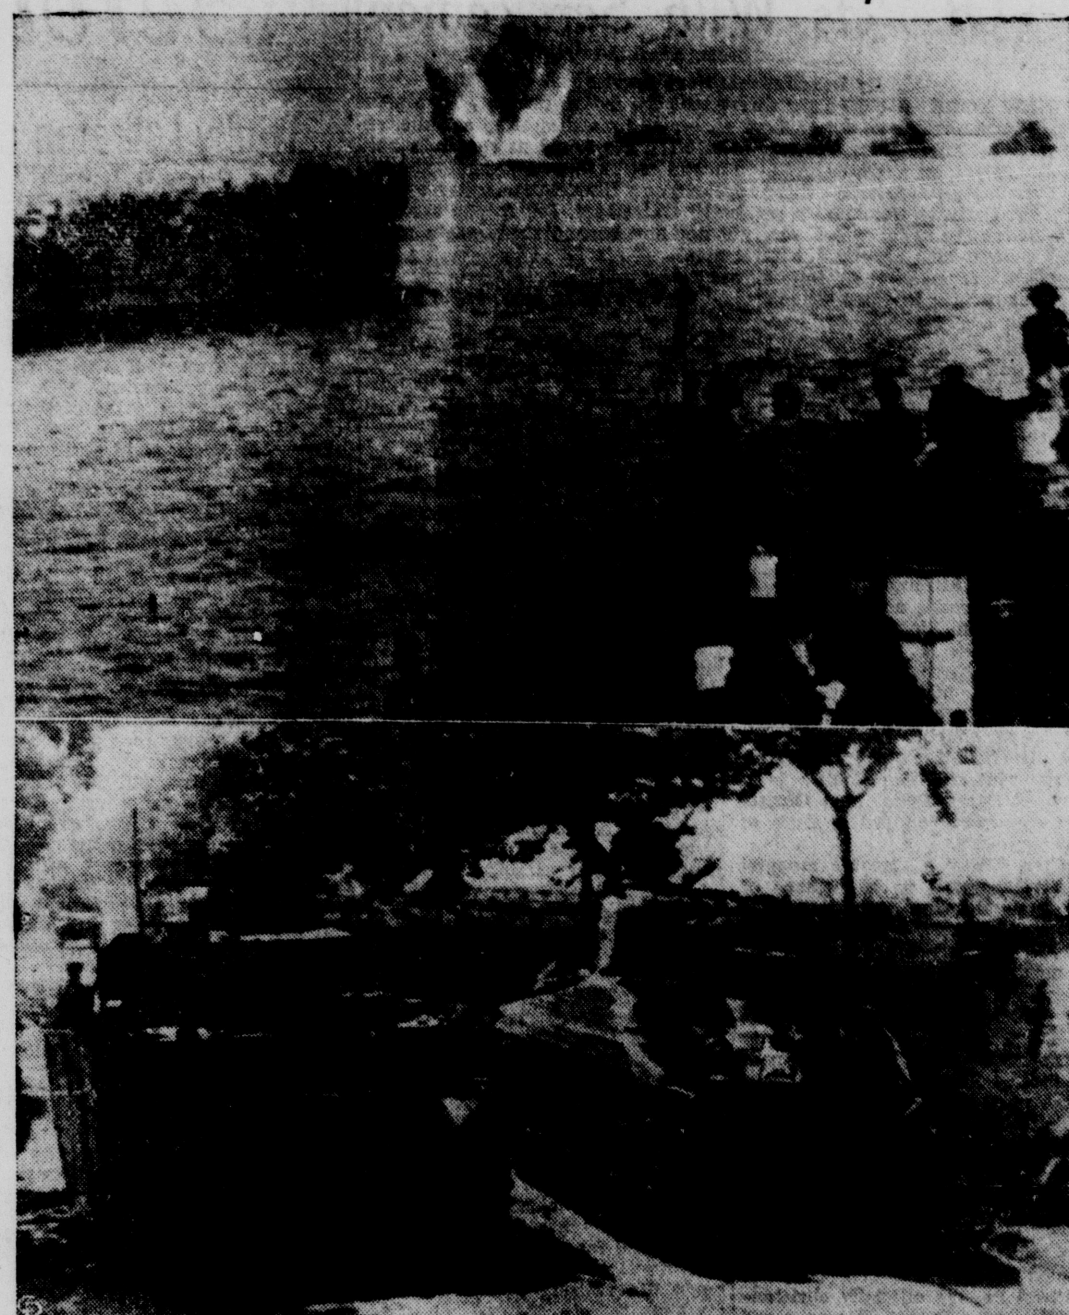

The great bit began to turn, like a giant auger digging its way into the earth, and presently it sank from sight. Slowly and watchfully Spud drilled, as if he were testing out some unseen antagonist. Here lay the great unteachable technique that only long experience could give—to know just how much pressure to give the bit. There were many ways of going astray; without enough pressure the bit would slide and drag over the rock face; too much pressure would cause it to chatter up and down, and perhaps break the stem or, even worse, drill a crooked hole. Here it was that drilling became a high art not lightly acquired, for from now on Spud had to rely upon the feel of the drill, the sound of the pump, and the pressure of the mud stream—but most of all on that indefinable sixth sense that came from twenty years on the derrick floor. (To Be Continued)

Jeep Is Put Into Use Right In Own Factory

TOLEDO—The jeep has come to its own rescue here. Its motor, adapted as a magnetic "scrap hound," is now being used to pick up sharp pieces of metal from the factory floors which formerly cut and punctured many of the scout car's tires.

Designed by conservation engineers at Willlys-Overland, the new device in its first month of operation reduced by 50 per cent the number of jeep tires rejected by government officials because of cuts sustained on test runs.

Stop Awhile--And Smile

TOO MUCH MAN FOR THE ARMY

CAMP LEE, Va. — Here is one fellow the Army didn't have a suit to fit.

William A. Sackel, Jr., wanted to get into the quartermasters, so he told recruiting officers he was six feet, six inches tall. He found the longest shirt sleeves struck him about the elbow, Army coats were much too short, the trousers were too tight, the shoes pinched his toes.

The Army gave him an honorable discharge. The tape measure showed he was six feet, 10 inches—too much of a man for the quartermaster corps.

PATIENT NEEDS CARPENTER, NOT DOCTOR

ALAMOSA, Colo.—C. R. Bollier city supervisor, isn't a doctor but he cured one of his employees of a broken leg in record time. The fellow called by telephone and said he wouldn't be at work because he had fractured a leg. Bollier went to his home, to offer his sympathy. He found that the leg was a wooden one. So he called a carpenter shop, arranged for repairs and ordered the employee to be on the job by noon.

THAT LANDING FIELD'S A TURKEY HOUSE

LARNED, Kas.—Mrs. Fred Webb keeps oil flares burning at night near her turkey shelter houses to frighten coyotes and other predators away from her 1,200 turkeys.

The other night a big Army bomber came over and circled several times. Then the pilot flew away. The next day a nearby Air Base was checking to determine what landing field was located near Larned.

THE FARMER MEETS HIS MULES

DUNLAP, Kas.—Pfc. Ralph Hayes, a farmer, sold his favorite team of mules last February 3 just before he entered the Army. The other day on Guadalcanal he heard a familiar hee-haw and, going to the source of the sound, found his mules. They also are working for Uncle Sam on Guadalcanal.

JUST LINE TRAINING. THAT'S ALL!

BOWLING GREEN—There is at least one student in the Navy V-12 unit at Bowling Green state university who takes his training literally.

Members of the group do a lot of standing in line—at meal times, on payday, and at examinations. When asked why the sailors in his contingent stand in line so frequently, the bright cadet remarked, "We're going to be line officers."

A LITTLE KNOWLEDGE, WELL DONE

FORT OGLETHORPE, Ga. — There's one WAC at the third training center here who knows practically all the answers—well down through "b" anyway.

Private Louise M. Kable of Kabletown, W. Va., had a job in New York rewriting an encyclopedia, but she'd finished only one volume before deciding to join the WAC.

CAMP POLK, La.—Actors of the USO camp show "Funzafire" were donning costumes and setting up scenery in the outdoor bowl here when a thunderstorm crashed the gate.

Actors and soldier assistants hauled properties and costumes aboard army trucks, whisked them to a nearby camp theater and were "set up" inside 10 minutes. Absolutely no time was lost, because the show had an audience waiting for it. It took over just as the movie ended.

How to keep the Good News Good!

THE WAR NEWS for the past few months has been mighty good for our side. And you can help keep it good. There's a big price tag on good news, on attacks and victories; a price tag of life, sacrifice, and cold hard cash. Our job here at home is to provide the cash. Plenty of it. Now!

Good news is born of action, action consumes material, material costs money. That's the reason for the Third War Loan that's now on. This Third War Loan calls for every working man and woman to put extra money into Bonds in September.

Not just the 10% of your salary. Not just spare change. Not just left-over dollars. But extra, hard-earned, budget-saved, money. It's the way, today, to back the men who are doing the real job of sacrificing.

Buy Bonds—up to the hilt—today. Keep that news good!

INVASION WEAPONS

FROM YOUR HANDS TO HIS!

YOU ARE the link between some soldier you know and victory.

Maybe he's a son, a husband, a sweetheart or a father. He may be just a friend. You know, the boy who used to crack your evening paper up against your front door around dinner time.

Wherever he is today—on one of the INVASION beachheads, or waiting the signal to open still another front—he's your boy, and he's counting on YOU!

ARE YOU GOING TO LET HIM DOWN?

What it comes down to is this: Are you going to buy enough War Bonds during the 3rd War Loan Drive to pay for the weapons he needs?

Your Government is asking for 15 billion dollars worth this month—to be purchased by individuals. That means you must put every dollar you can scrape together into War Bonds now.

You can't do less and remain an American. You know what America means—it means freedom. All the bonds you buy this month will still be a lot less than freedom is worth to you, and to him.

And it's a lot less than he's paying right now to keep freedom a living, breathing reality.

You are urged to buy at least one extra $100 Bond above your regular purchases. Some of you will have to invest thousands. Take it out of your income or your idle funds—but buy all you can!

YOUR INVESTMENT IN VICTORY

And another thing. The bonds you buy are not gifts, they're investments—investments in victory and your and your family's future.

They are installments on the brave new world which we all will help build after the war is won. With them you will be able to buy added comforts and enjoy greater opportunities for yourself and those you love.

Buy that extra $100 War Bond today. Your hands—the hands of an American—will be passing the INVASION weapons of victory to that boy of yours—or some boy you know.

Quakers Display Versatility In Defeating Sebring, 45 To 6

Crowd Of 5,000 Turns Out To Watch Coach Barrett's Eleven Open Season Here

A scrappy and versatile Salem High school football team handed Sebring High school's Trojans a 45 to 6 defeat Friday night before a crowd of some 5,000 fans who turned out at Reilly Stadium to get a perspective on the 1943 Quakers, coached by Ben Barrett, former Struthers grid mentor.

The crowd was pleased, to say the least, although the husky-looking Sebring eleven failed to provide any real opposition until the closing minutes of the fourth quarter when the visitors barely succeeded in crossing the goal line on an end run.

Salem, scoring two touchdowns within six minutes after the opening of the game—the first in six plays—registered 20 points in the first quarter, pushed across two more touchdowns for 12 points in the second and returned after the half to score 13 more points the third quarter.

Sebring, covering most of its ground on passes, only threatened after Barrett revived his regulars and sent in the second-string team.

Salem gained 214 yards in scrimmaging, whereas Sebring accounted for only 82 yards in rushing.

After Salem received Sebring's kickoff, the Quakers, in three plays, carried the ball to the Sebring 30-yard strip. Frank Entriken passed 35 yards to Walt Brian who was downed on the Sebring five. Entriken plunged for the first touchdown and Dick Greene's place-kick was good.

Later Salem recovered a Sebring fumble on the visitor's 33-yard marker and Entriken passed to Ray Wise who raced for a touchdown, eluding four would be tacklers. Sebring took the ball but failed to gain. The Quakers reached the opponent's 19 yard line on a pass and shortly afterwards, Greene, on a reverse, ran 14 yards to score. Greene also kicked the extra point.

Sebring Kick Blocked
Sebring failed to gain and punted to Salem. The Quakers gained considerable ground through line plunges and passes and Entriken passed to Greene which was good for 16 yards and another touchdown.

Shortly afterwards Sebring registered its initial first down on a pass was stopped cold. A Sebring kick was blocked by a Salem man on the visitor's 32-yard marker, and Ben Kupka scooped it up and ran for a touchdown. The Trojans again took to the air to no avail as the half ended.

The third quarter opened with Greene forwarding to Brian who lateraled to Francis Lanney. The latter then galloped across the goal line to make it 39-0, Greene passing to Brian for the extra point.

The Quakers next score came when Entriken raced around right end for 40 yards and was brought down on the Sebring 11. He again took the ball and went over his own right tackle to score. The place-kick failed.

Visitors Threaten

Salem's second-stringers exchanged the ball several times with Sebring as the final quarter opened, the Quakers losing the ball on downs after Sebring had punted to the Quakers 45. A pass put the visitors on the Salem 25 and some of Salem's regulars were sent back in. A short pass gave Sebring 12 more yards and then Michael plunged through to Salem's eight. The visitors plunged again to make it a first down and after failing on three pass attempts, Ken Heatherington, a substitute, ran around right end to score. The place-kick failed.

"George" Does Good Job For Flying Fortress Crew

SALT LAKE CITY—"Let George do it" has a new twist for a Flying Fortress crew in North Africa. Staff Sergeant Thomas J. McGlynn, a tall, slender, from Cleveland, now stationed at the air base here, said "George" was a sunken ship in a Mediterranean harbor.

"When we were sent out on a mission," McGlynn said, "the position of our target was given as 400 yards west of 'George,' or whatever the distance and direction might be. So 'George' did a good job for us."

GEORGIA WINS IN SEASON'S OPENER

By HAROLD CLAASSEN

NEW YORK, Sept. 18—Georgia, beret of every player that brought it the Rose Bowl championship on Jan. 1, hurdled its first football obstacle of the present campaign and put it squarely up to Michigan, Purdue, Duke, Iowa Pre-Flight, Villanova and Cornell to do the same today.

Coach Wally Butts smiled with satisfaction last night as his grid infants and 4-Fs galloped to a 25 to 7 verdict over a Presbyterian college outfit that belted Fort Jackson, 41 to 0, only a week ago.

The Georgia success was only a warmup for the season's second football Saturday that has Michigan transporting its collection of stars to Camp Grant, winner last week by a 23 to 0 edge over Illinois; and Purdue visiting Great Lakes.

Those two games would do credit to a November date, and a capacity throng of 7,000 is slated for the Wolverine-Camp Grant affair and 20,000 sailors will be in the stands for the Great Lakes unveiling.

The Iowa Seahawks, tutored this year by Lieut. Don Faurot, met with Illinois, Indiana tangles on Miami of Ohio, Washburn plays Kansas under the light while Wisconsin and Marquette resume their old rivalry in other midwestern games. Camp Lejeune sends its towering Marines against Duke, regarded by many as the second best team in the south behind Georgia Tech. Yale and Rochester, a pair of first time winners a week ago, meet. Cornell's Big Red tests Bucknell. Mulenberg hopes to right itself against Villanova and the Coast Guard Academy tangles with Bates in other eastern games.

Ohio Soldier, Back From Munda, Tells Of Jap Conquest

(By Associated Press)
COLUMBUS, Sept. 18 — Ohio soldiers who fought with units of the 37th division in the battle of Munda "had to keep awake in their foxholes or a Jap would crawl right in with them."

That's the first-hand account of Corp. Dale Bestwick of Columbus, one of four Munda veterans selected to return to this country to attend officer candidate school.

He described the 23-day campaign for the Jap airbase as "one grand push."

"We backed 'em right up to the ocean and then poured it into 'em. I'd say there wasn't a live Jap left on Munda when we got through. Every man got his share."

Bestwick highly of Maj. Gen. Robert S. Beightler, commander of the 37th.

"He wouldn't tell us where to go, he'd lead us," the 25-year-old soldier said. "I'll tell you this much. General Beightler was out of his foxhole a lot of times when we were in 'em. He's got the admiration of every boy there."

The Ohioans proved they could take it during those 23 days, Bestwick reported.

"I didn't think my body could take some of the things we went through," he reflected grimly. "Things like lying out in the rain with no shelter and mosquitos eating you up. We never changed clothes in all those 23 days. We just laid there in the mud because there wasn't anything else to do."

Coal Miner Sues State For Compensation Pay

LISBON, Sept. 18.—The state industrial commission was named defendant in an action filed in common pleas court today by Thomas E. Brown, who seeks the right to participate in the state insurance fund.

Brown was crushed about the chest and neck Aug. 29, 1935, while employed by the Grant Coal Co., when caught between a coal car and the mine roof, and it is claimed suffered permanent injuries. The claim was allowed from the date of injury until July 19, 1942, when the industrial commission terminated the compensation, stating "the disability beyond that for which compensation was being paid is not the result of the injury upon which this claim is based."

CAUTION CONGRESS ON MILK PROBLEM

Warnings of Shortage Sets Stage for New Subsidies Squabble

(By Associated Press)
WASHINGTON, Sept. 18.—The administration's warnings of an impending crisis in milk production today set the stage for a new squabble in Congress over government subsidies.

War Food Administrator Marvin Jones asked senate banking and agriculture committee members yesterday to consider subsidy proposals to keep milk production at the required peak and promptly ran into the sort of subsidy criticism that enlivened last spring's sessions.

The need for immediate action to provide dairy farmers with an increase of at least a cent a quart to cover higher feed and manpower costs was not in dispute.

Senator Danaher (R-Conn.), a member of the senate banking committee, which heard Jones ask for advice at an informal conference, demanded that the administration make its own decision immediately.

Danaher said congressional opposition to subsidies was well known and little was to be gained by consulting with members.

Jones said he was simply seeking suggestions, but he asked consideration for one of three proposals:

A flat one-cent a quart subsidy; a subsidy for higher-price milk areas and a price increase in other areas; or a subsidy to producers to cover increased food costs since September, 1943.

"There is another alternative," Senator Willis (R-Ind.) said, "and that is an increase in the price of milk."

Jones made it clear that this would run afoul of President Roosevelt's avowed program to hold the retail price line.

Banking Committee Chairman Wagner (D-NY) said he was ready to support any subsidy and would oppose any price increase.

The War Today By DeWitt MacKenzie

with the idea for some time.

The seed of revolt was thrown on fertile ground in the Balkans and if I were head of one of the three governments concerned I should be inclined to expect indirect aid of some sort from the Allies if my country threw Hitler overboard. It would be strange if a general upheaval in the peninsula didn't bring quick action by the United Nations.

IN the matter of the European air front Mr. Roosevelt was more specific. He made the quip that Hitler had failed to roof the European fortress which the Nazi chief boasted was impregnable. The President then bluntly advised the Fuehrer that Britain and America are going to set up bomber bases from which southern and eastern Germany will be devastated.

The war industries of these isolated parts of the Reich have become absolutely vital to Hitler — almost a last resort for supplies — because of the terrible destruction wrought by Anglo-American bomber fleets in the Ruhr and other mainstays of western Germany and France.

F. D. R. certainly drew blood with this announcement because only so long ago as Sept. 8 Hitler's guttural tones informed his people that "only by air can the enemy terrorize the German hinterland." He said Nazidom was devising means to counter Allied aerial attacks—but talk never wrecked a bomber.

Roosevelt's message was full of meat, but this column has space for only two more points. It was heartening to have him give us the categorical assurance that not only Hitler and the Nazis must go,

George Stevens, Claudette Colbert in a scene from "So Proudly We Hail," authenticated account of Army nurses evacuated from Corregidor!

The plot of "So Proudly We Hail," featured at the State Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, concerns itself with the romances and the work of three lovely nurses, Claudette Colbert, Veronica Lake and Paulette Goddard, part of a group who are sent to Bataan. What happens to them there, and subsequently on Corregidor, is said to make the picture one of the great film stories of all times. George Reeves and Sonny Tufts have the masculine leads.
